Hiku about the Four Spirits

In the realms of myth and legend, the Four Spirits stand guard. To the north, the Black Tortoise, symbol of longevity and winter's might, holds steadfast in the cold. The Vermilion Bird in the south, with fiery wings, heralds the summer's heat and passion's flight. In the east, the Azure Dragon rises, spring in its claw, life's renewal in its breath. And to the west, the White Tiger paces, autumn's guardian, with a gaze that pierces through the harvest's end. Together, they balance the world, a quartet of harmony in the celestial dance.
